Public Relations & Communications in the Public Sector

Course Overview:

Public Relations and Communications are at the core of business performance. Different modern methods, tools, and channels have greatly increased the speed at which communications can be experienced, from local to global. A possible difference between public relations and communications is the exchange of information. Sometimes, public relation is a one-way channel that imposes information in an attempt to have a more favourable public image. Communications may be more rooted in the two-way functionality of receiving feedback and making changes based on information collected
